

181st WPI-IIIS Seminar

The Art of Publishing Scientific Papers

The ‘Editorial Process’ is like a battlefield, where just one wrong move can be fatal. The first step in this process is the preparation of your manuscript. In my talk, I will share with you insights, as a former scientific editor at Cell Press, on how to more effectively prepare, and ultimately publish, your paper. I will also discuss my personal views on the current state of life sciences in Japan, emphasizing on areas that I believe require further improvements and provide tips/strategies on how to accomplish this. With this, my aim is to help you prepare your next manuscript better and increase the chances of successfully publishing your work.
